Medical Travel to China

Process information only. Not medical advice. Diagnosis, treatment plan, quotation and admission are decided by licensed Chinese hospitals.

1. S2 medical visa document checklist

? Passport (valid for at least 6 months)
? Visa application form signed by the applicant
? Invitation letter or hospital appointment confirmation
? The supporting document list provided by the receiving hospital

2. Medical record translation standards

? Certified translation for imaging reports, pathology and discharge summaries
? Keep the original scans; translation is additional, not a replacement
? Include patient name, exam date and the hospital stamp on every page

3. TPA insurance and direct billing rules

? Confirm in writing whether your insurer settles directly with the hospital
? If reimbursement is required, ask for the itemised invoice and medical certificate
? Check the annual limit, deductible and pre-existing condition clauses

4. Caregiver entry and accommodation

? Each accompanying person needs their own visa and entry clearance
? Long stays require a residence permit
? Ask the hospital international department about nearby accommodation and rates

5. Remote pre-assessment submission workflow

? Submit imaging and reports through the formal channel, not by chat
? The hospital international department replies with a reception plan and timeline
? Keep every submission record; it is what the clinical team actually reviews

Need a specialty guide or 1:1 coordination? Use Mode B - the Mode A question wall cannot provide clinical assessment.
